(WASHINGTON, D.C.) – Tonight, Democratic and Republican leaders announced a deal to fund the federal government over the next few days and keep agency offices open during final negotiations. Russ Carnahan (D-MO) offered the following statement:

“I’m very frustrated that this process continues to drag on without final resolution. That said, I’m glad to see government services continue over the weekend during final negotiations. I hope we can move swiftly to put this issue to rest for good and move on to refocus our work on growing jobs and passing a responsible budget for 2012 that protects our seniors.”
